A ceramic figurine tilting expressively, an intricately folded paper sculpture, the autumn sunlight captured intimately on the face of a young boy—you will find these moments and more in this surprising exhibition from the young, creative minds of Brockton Public School students. The exhibition Brockton Youth Creates: Artwork by Brockton Public School Students is now on view in our Community Gallery and showcases 38 works of art.

Fuller Craft Museum has enjoyed a long-standing partnership with Brockton Public Schools. Through this creative exchange, the young visitors have developed a deeper understanding of craft and the visual arts as a means of personal expression. These talented students now serve as inspiration to our visitors in Brockton Youth Creates: Artwork by Brockton Public School Students. A variety of media and content are included in this splendid exhibition, showcasing the boundless talent to be found in the classrooms and studios of Brockton Public Schools.

Fuller Craft Museum extends a special thanks to Sarah Richards, Museum Trustee and Brockton Public Schools Coordinator of Art K – 12, for her collaborative efforts on this exhibition. We also thank the participating students, their families, and the museum staff for their contributions.
