Our Mission
Fuller Craft Museum offers expansive opportunities to discover the world of contemporary craft. By exploring the leading edge of craft through exhibitions, collections, education, and public programs, we challenge perceptions and build appreciation of the material world. Our purpose is to inspire, stimulate, and enrich an ever-expanding community.

Our Vision
Fuller Craft Museum aspires to be the nexus of contemporary craft. Embodied by creative aesthetic, concept expression, and cultural meaning, we will serve as a public resource to chronicle, interpret, and present craft in its many forms. We will support, redefine, and influence the field through exploration, education, and thought leadership. Our goal is to expand awareness, insight, and accessibility for our growing audiences.
A NOTE FROM ANNIE ROSEN
Dear Friends,

Welcome to a New Era of Fuller Craft Museum!

2019 was a shiny year for us here at Fuller Craft. We celebrated our 50th anniversary turning to gold to commemorate such a milestone with the exhibition Striking Gold: Fuller at Fifty. The yearlong festivities culminated with a beautiful social event on and around the museum's grounds.

2020 began with anticipation marked by the enthusiasm fueled by the news from the American Craft Council honoring Fuller Craft with the 2020 Award of Distinction, which recognizes individuals and organizations for exceptional artistic, scholarly, and philanthropic contributions to the craft field. Empowered by so many outstanding accomplishments, we were ready and excited to start a new year introducing innovative programs and exhibitions.

And then the world came to a halt. With no other choice, due to the global pandemic, our doors closed for seven months. However, the flame of enthusiasm was still burning. We continued to focus on our mission, care for our collection and facilities, and support our community of artists whose contributions and artistic practices we deeply value.

2021 started with prosperous signs of recovery, rebuilding, and infinite gratitude for the support we received from our community, supporters, members, volunteers, and board of directors. I extend a special thanks to Fuller Craft’s talented and dedicated team of professional staff who fearlessly navigated through unprecedented challenges. Working collaboratively, they made rapidly significant shifts to the digital realm, kept our audience connected, close, and informed as we reached and engaged new audiences from all over the world. We affirmed the power of contemporary craft as a tool for healing and recovering, and we continued to make art experiences inclusive and accessible for all.

Our Museum Educators are an integral part of our mission and programs. They adhered to new circumstances and embraced new ways to learn, train, communicate, and skillfully delivered virtual tours and school programs to Brockton Public School students.

The strategic plan was revised with unparalleled support from our board of trustees and committee members. To highlight some of the most recent accomplishments, we created a Diversity Equity and Inclusion Committee, grew our staff and team, introduced a paid internship program for Brockton high school students, secured funding for outdoor facilities improvements and repairs, and welcomed new board members. Looking ahead, we look forward to launching a paid internship program for arts administration graduate students from underserved communities, and with much anticipation, we are ready to unveil a new logo for Fuller Craft Museum. Most importantly, we are proud and pleased to maintain free admission to all with a suggested donation. And all thanks to you, our partners, and supporters.

For fifty years, through mission and leadership transitions, economic downturns, and a recent global pandemic while navigating through uncertainty, we remarkably quickly adapted to the new normal. During the worst of the COVID-19 pandemic, Denise LeBlanc played a crucial role in FCM strategic leadership, successfully leading the organization with devotion and outstanding commitment towards our members, mission, and beloved community. We are incredibly grateful for Denise’s dedication and vision. As she announced her departure from the Executive Director position in 2021, we share our tremendous gratitude and wish her well in her new endeavors.

In this new era, The Board of Trustees of Fuller Craft Museum is thrilled to announce its new Executive Director, Erin McGough, effective January 3, 2022. Erin will work with staff and the Board of Trustees to meet the goals of the current strategic plan—advance the field, expand the audience, engage the community, and sustain resources—and develop the next strategic plan to launch in 2023.

As we continue to make great strides in executing our strategic plan, we look forward to another prosperous year. I hope this annual report covering 2020 and 2021 offers an overview of how Fuller Craft managed its finances, acquisitions, exhibition, public programs, and how we responded and remained relevant while actively serving our community.
EXHIBITIONS

Fuller Craft Museum’s Curatorial department oversees all exhibitions and collections activity for the institution. The robust exhibition program includes 12 – 15 shows each year, featuring hundreds of artists from across the globe. The projects explore both the steadfast traditions and the leading edge of contemporary craft through a range of media, subject matter, and technical innovation. Our goal is to offer exhibitions to our visitors that fully engage them in the world of craft and offer new ways of understanding the world around us.

The Curatorial staff also manages the museum’s permanent collection. Comprised of over 800 objects, the collection encompasses all craft media—wood, metal, fiber, ceramics, and metal, as well as found objects and other tactile materials. The aim of the permanent collection is to preserve the history of the contemporary craft field while advancing the field through thoughtful acquisitions of living artists. What’s more, our collecting strategy dovetails with Fuller Craft Museum’s institutional objectives as outlined in our Strategic Plan, with equitable representation and community engagement as leading drivers.

Finally, as styles, techniques, and meanings in the field progress, what endures is the work of the hand and a connection between the maker and the object.

Exhibitions committee

In collaboration with the museum’s Executive Director, the Artistic Director/Chief Curator works with a volunteer Exhibitions Committee consisting of educators, administrators, curators, scholars, artists, academics, designers and collectors, each of whom serves at the invitation of the Executive Director. The Exhibitions Committee meets several times each year to consider exhibition proposals, provide feedback, and offer suggestions for funding, marketing, programming, and other aspects of exhibition development.
During FY2020 and FY2021, Fuller Craft Museum was privileged to welcome 34 works into the Permanent Collection, representing 29 artists in glass, ceramics, fiber, jewelry, wood, metalsmithing, and outdoor sculpture. These acquisitions expanded the depth and breadth of the Museum’s holdings in contemporary craft, and we offer our heartfelt thanks to the artists, donors, and galleries whose work and generosity made these additions possible.

The Education Department strives to provide dynamic opportunities for a wide and expanding audience to acquire knowledge about craft through meaningful interpretation of exhibitions and through hands-on workshops, guided tours, classes and other public programming, both in-person and virtually.

Our community engagement efforts are dedicated to enriching, and celebrating art, culture, and education in our local and regional communities and provides a vital link between the museum and Greater Brockton. We are actively working to build an inclusive, creative community which reduces barriers and increases access to our programs while fostering a sense of belonging.
EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMMING

Craft Chats: a series of casual conversations with artists and makers about contemporary craft. A sneak peek inside their work and practice, live on Zoom.

Craft Inspires: a series of exciting public programs where you’re invited to hear from special guests and connect with a wide range of voices, ideas, and perspectives on contemporary craft, live on Zoom.

In-person workshops and classes:
- 30 in FY20
- 19 in FY21

Brockton Public Schools
- 3k students attended virtual or in-person tour in FY20
- 93 virtual tours in FY21

Although my great uncle, Myron Fuller, roamed the world’s oil fields as a well-known geologist, he loved and never forgot Brockton, his hometown. When it came time to write his will, Myron did something we all celebrate even today, the funds to establish the Fuller Museum. One has to conclude that Myron would be surprised but proud of the transition from what he likely foresaw as a rocks and minerals collection to the outstanding and forward thinking center for crafts that he made possible with his gift to the city.

There was an unexpected and unplanned part of the opening night’s elegant and sophisticated festivities, however, that quite likely Myron would have appreciated and laughed at. Halfway through the festivities as the champagne flowed, the doors opened and a full contingent of Brockton’s Fire Department entered but it wasn’t to view the excellent initial exhibit of paintings curated by Director Edourd DeBuron.

It seems that the crowd of party-goers set off the heat detectors causing the unexpected visit from the fire department. There we were in tuxedoes and fancy dresses surrounded by firemen in boots, waterproof coats and carrying all sorts of equipment.

Seriously, the Fuller Craft Museum is a place of wonderful creative vision with an excellent staff which has helped raise Brockton’s stature beyond that of just one more old industrial New England city. It’s a place Myron would be proud of.
